Biographical Note:

University of South Carolina professor Betty Glad is remembered as a teacher, writer, political scientist, historian, researcher, and mentor. Her publications on political leaders Charles Evans Hughes, Key Pittman, Ronald Reagan, and Jimmy Carter gave her the reputation for being a top authority on American politics and leadership.

Glad was born September 27, 1927 in Utah, and graduated from the University of Utah magna cum laude with a B.S. in Political Science. Coincidentally, she received her wings from United Air Lines Stewardess Training School in Cheyenne, Wyoming and Phi Beta Kappa award on the same night in 1949. It was during her time as a stewardess that Glad, working on night flights, pursued her Ph.D. in Political Science. It is mentioned in economist Julian Simon's autobiography that it was Glad who inspired his idea for the volunteer incentive plan used on overbooked airlines. Glad received her doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1962 and taught at several universities, including Mount Holyoke College, Brooklyn College, Purdue University, and University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign before coming to the University of South Carolina in 1989.

Although her first book, Charles Evans Hughes, was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize, Glad is more notably recognized for her work on Jimmy Carter. In her 1980 book, Jimmy Carter: In Search of the Great White House, Glad evaluates the Carter Administration by considering Carter's early political career, southern politics, and strategies used during his campaign. Glad revisited Carter in her 2009 book An Outsider in the White House, providing an in-depth study into Jimmy Carter's presidency while evaluating his success as a foreign policy president.

Glad's awards and honors include the Frank D. Goodnow Award from the American Political Science Association for a lifetime of contributions and service to the discipline, the Harold Lasswell Award from the International Society for Political Psychology for a lifetime of outstanding contributions to political psychology, and the Outstanding Professional Achievement Award from the Midwest Women's Caucus for Political Science. She served as President of the International Society for Political Psychology, President of the Presidency Research Section of the American Political Science Association, Vice-President of the American Political Science Association, and was the Olin D. Johnston Professor of Political Science and Distinguished Professor Emerita at the University of South Carolina.

Glad was among the first women to earn a Ph.D. in Political Science and subsequently teach at a Ph.D.-granting institution as well as was the first woman chair of the University of Illinois Department of Political Science. She is remembered as not only a leader but also a pioneer for women in the field of Political Science. She passed away August 2, 2010.

Scope and Content Note:

Comprising 5 linear feet, Glad's papers provide insight into her distinguished career as a researcher and historian. The collection chiefly contains interview notes and transcriptions for her published works as well as clippings that highlight her success. Also present is research material for her 1980 book, Jimmy Carter: In Search of the Great White House, including the famous Playboy interview and transcripts of her interviews with various politicians, community leaders, and Carter's family and friends. Of particular interest are interviews from Carter's high school classmates and his mother, Lillian Carter. The articles and transcripts in the research series, arranged by author then chronologically, cover various topics concerning Carter's campaign, politics, family and opposition. Included among this series are the 1976 transcripts for Jimmy Carter's interview on CBS's "Face the Nation" and Bill Moyers interview with Jimmy Carter on PBS's special edition of "USA: People and Politics."
